Course: “Radiation Update – Proper Training and Protection”

Course Description: Radiology in the dental field has long been proven beneficial, aiding in the detection of structural abnormalities and disease. However, such benefits do come with a certain level of risk, which has been gratefully reduced over time. The purpose of this course is to review general information, requirements and safety procedures necessary to provide efficient and safe radiological procedures in dentistry. Following the presentation of this course, the dental professional will be able to identify and understand the following in regards to radiation:

- Basic Properties
- Sources of Radiation
- Biological Effects Resulting from Exposure
- Imaging- Recording and Processing
- Proper Procedures
- Regulations
- Units of Measurement
- Methods of Protection Against Exposure
- Proper X-ray Equipment
- Patient Exposure and Positioning
- Quality Assurance Program

Speaker: Sarah Goard, RDH, BS

Sarah Goard is a graduate of Gannon University. Here she earned her bachelor’s degree in biology, later pursuing dental hygiene and earning her A.S.T. degree from Fortis Institute Erie. Since becoming licensed in 2013, Sarah has primarily worked in private practice but has also remained an active volunteer providing services to those in need through Mom-n-PA, Sealant Saturday, and Give Kids a Smile. She is also a part time dental hygiene instructor at Fortis Erie and an active member of the ADHA/ PDHA in which she serves as delegate and trustee respectively.
